2. [REDACTED] is housed in a small duplex house several miles removed from the [REDACTED] office area. Training equipment of a portable nature, including an automatic tape sender, oscillators, and power supply is set up in the second floor kitchen and schedules are run daily from 08:30 until 23:00. When the main source of power is not available a portable gasoline driven generator is run to furnish the required electricity. [REDACTED] lives at this house and has a trusted maid (indigenous) to assist with domestic problems. The maid is not permitted on the second floor during training hours. The house has been procured on a 60 day basis and will be retained until the training of [REDACTED] has been completed.

3. The training schedule is divided into three lectures. At no time are the students together as they appear at different hours. A reasonable interval is provided after the departure of each student and before the scheduling of the next student.

4. Under a separate cover we have reported on the students' progress.

5. As we [REDACTED] agreed, no radio transmissions will be undertaken from the [REDACTED] site; that is, no actual training tests will be performed from this site. As the individuals complete their training up to the point where they are capable of operating a radio
